As an art director,
I tried to work with
professional
illustrators
whenever possible.
But I've stepped
in from time to
time to fill a budget
gap or to create
my own personal
projects. Here
are some of the results.

First of all, I'm an avid pastellist and Sunday painter. My work is mostly plein air landscape, but I have been known to do other things—as long as they're not too realistic.

Meet Emily Compost. She was the result of a small (read low-budget) billing insert that gave advice to homeowners about composting. The clippings were all from my back yard.

Which came first?
This bird was part
of a comp that I
did for a children's product.

SHOW ME YOUR PAPERS!

This is the extent
of my cartoon
style. If you don't like wiggly lines,
then someone else
needs to do it.

I send out holiday cards to clients, family and friends. These are some of the designs.

A client gives to a bread bank instead of sending out gifts to her clients; I played with wheat wreaths to create her email about this.

Designers are always doing simple digital illustrations as part of the main project. I've done hundreds, of which these are simply examples.

Please call or email if I can help you with your illustration or design
projects.
